Become a partner of the 13th edition of the port of the future conference and of the PIANC Mediterranean Days and take the opportunity of the audience of this unique event dedicated to the port ecosystem to enhance your image

Since 2011, the Port of the Future conference brings together actors and researchers of the port sector (public and private, economic and academics) to work and exchange on topics at the intersection of different disciplines (engineering, technology, sociology, economics, ecology,...).

The ambition of this event is to strengthen the place of innovation, to offer to national actors moments of discussions with a forward vision and an international exposure as well as technical contributions and debates, on the subjects that will make the port of tomorrow.

This year, the 13th Port of the Future Conference will be held in conjunction with the PIANC - AIPCN France Mediterranean Days to propose more contents and exchanges around the challenges of ecological transition and innovation applying to the port world.

AIPCN (PIANC) is the world association for waterborne transport infrastructure. It aims to promote the operating conditions of navigation, both inland waterway and maritime. It gathers a network of technical experts in the fields of port, maritime and river engineering.
